

From You to Your Economics: A Crash Course

If you've read a few things on this website, perhaps exploring some of the narrative in Learn, you might feel that you'd like to share some of what you've come across. Or perhaps you are completely new to the site, but find learning with others easier than just reading something on your own.

We want to help you create conversations with other interested minds to talk about these issues in a way that's accessible to everyone. We're creating a set of workshops that anyone can run with friends, neighbours, colleagues, a community group, or whoever's keen to come along - we'll design the courses in such a way that anywhere from three to 20 people could run one together.

What's in the course?

The course will consist of 10 lesson plans PDFs. Each lesson corresponds with one of the topics within the 'Learn' section of this website:

- You
- Your Home
- Your Livelihood
- Your Workplace
- Your Money
- Your Society
- Your Government
- Your World
- Your Future

What background knowledge do I need to run a workshop?

None! Anyone can run our workshops – all you'll need are the lesson plans provided, and a bit of time to read them over and think about the lesson. We'll also produce a more thorough reading list to help you get more into each topic. Have a look at the Learn section of the website to familiarise yourself with the narrative behind the workshop outline.

We'll provide you with printouts, facilitation guides, icebreaker games, and anything else you need to run the course in your communities.
